Books are great treasure of knowledge. They are the living examples of man's march on the path to higher and higher civilization. The great men who died long ago, live in their books. We feel their very personality and existence when we read their books. We feel as if they were conversing with us.

Books not only store civilization but also carry it forward. All coming generations get the light of knowledge from the books written by their ancestors and try to improve upon that knowledge. Civilizations cannot make such headway in a country where there are not many good books. We get through books the latest knowledge in the fields of art, science and commerce, etc., this knowledge is helpful to us and enables us to achieve success in the field of our choice.

Books are never failing friends. They never desert us, not even when all fair-weather friends have deserted us. They dispel the dark clouds of gloom from our minds and increase our happiness if we are already happy. Through the ages, the scriptures and other great books have provided immeasurable solace to the wounded and strife-torn humanity.

There may books prescribed for some course or profession, but then there are books for general study. The books of literature - poetry, drama, novel, short stories, etc., are generally highly thrilling and inspiring if they are written by good author. There may be tragic, comical or humorous books. The question is that of an individual's choice.

To be a lover of books , though not to be a book worm, is a sign of good luck. A voracious reader gets much more pleasure from reading books than the miser gets in hoarding money. The knowledge embedded in books is priceless, so the pleasure obtained from reading books. A good book absorbs the whole spirit of man. The reader's pleasure is indescribable.

III. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions below : (1×5=5)

Today, researches are being conducted to study the effect of mind over body. A few years ago, when the following incident occurred, I would have passed it off as a mere coincident – but not today. Darshan Singh was a 70-year-old man living in the neighborhood. He was very sociable and a frequent visitor at home. Both his sons were abroad and his married daughter was in Assam. One day, he developed a serious heart trouble and was admitted to the Intensive Cardiac Care Unit (ICCU) in my hospital. Over a period of 3-4 days, he showed improvement and pronounced stable and out of danger. In the meantime, a telegram was sent to his daughter and she was to arrive in 3-4 days' time.

Every evening, before I went home, I would pay him courtesy call. One day, I suddenly had an urge to visit him in the morning. At about 11.30 a.m. when I visited him, he was looking a lot better and started asking me when our doctors would take him out from the ICCU. He again reminded me to get his daughter back in Mumbai as early as possible as he had an intensive desire to see his little grandchildren. While talking to him, I noticed a team of doctors trying in vain to revive a young heart-that of a 35-year-old man who had sustained a massive heart attack and was by then almost dead. Out of curiosity, I looked at the cardiac monitor of Shri Singh suddenly collapsed and was immediately revived. He was now critical though conscious. There was yet another request to trunk-call his daughter. He lived for about six days till his daughter and grandchildren had a chance to see him and then he passed away peacefully. Human nature and intuition are inexplicable.
